She was tougher than me, but I learned from her.

my favorite memory of my grandma bridget was when she chaperoned for one of my field trips to the space and rocket center. i was in like 3rd grade and each of the chaperones had a group of 6 or 7 kids. anyways, she ended up riding all the rides with us and buying us all astronaut ice cream. all of the other groups ended up being jealous because of how awesome of a chaperone she was and the kids in my group told me how awesome of a grandma i had. i'm so grateful i had her as my grandma, she's given so much for me and my sister over the years. i will love and miss her forever and am eternally grateful for the family she has given me. fly high, GB.

“ As young children she was the tomboy and loved to play tough. So tough she bent her finger backwards wrestling. She made me climb on top our little shed to take a puff off a cigarette. She said she made me do it so if she got caught she wouldn't be the only one. She would chase me down the street with a cockroach and if she caught up with me she would smoosh in in my hair. She had me sneak out the house when we were around 13 & 14 to go to her boyfriends house so she could kiss him. As young adults we went to bingo often. She was godmother to my son Steve and I am godmother to her daughter Jeanette ❤️. We shared many life moments and stories. We faced hurts together and learned forgiveness together. All of us sisters and brothers got together for her last birthday at a casino, she said it was her best birthday ever ❤️. I will miss our many talks about life.

I met her at the lakefront one day. She was playing football with her friends and I saw her running out for a pass and caught a great overhead pass. I can't remember exactly how we started talking but a few weeks later we were married. She suffered from chronic pain for 30 years so couldn't play football anymore but always fought through it and made my life so much better then I could ever have imagined. I am humbled by her toughness and I don't think I could have caught that pass.

“ I will always treasure my memories of the time I spent with Aunt Bridget in Alabama. Every time I visited she made sure we had a great time with plenty to do. I remember going out in the boat and camping but most of all I'll always remember the pranks she often pulled on us. Aunt Bridget knew how to have fun. She also loved and cared very much for her family. When my brother died I knew she would travel to be here with us and she did. Once back home in Alabama she constantly called or texted checking on us, especially her brother, my dad.
