“ A Final Note to a Dear Friend

I had been trying to contact Ken to wish him a Happy New Year and was completely caught off guard by learning of his passing. My deepest sympathy goes out to his sons and stepchildren as you grieve the loss of Ken.

Ken and I first met by telephone in the late 1980s while I was in Korea, when I was exploring the use of his CD jukebox technology—revolutionary at the time. From that first conversation, we developed a long-distance friendship that endured for decades. We would often meet at COMDEX in Las Vegas, sharing a room for the week and many memorable conversations.

Ken was profoundly intelligent and refreshingly frank. He spoke openly, always true to his beliefs, and I respected him deeply for that. He was also deeply heartbroken by the loss of Lynda, a grief that stayed with him.

I will miss our conversations. He was always patient with me, even when I struggled to fully grasp the technology as he explained it. Whenever we met, we inevitably shared Mexican food. It was a genuine privilege to call him my friend.

Ken was driven by the challenges technology presented. He questioned assumptions, confronted obstacles head-on, and worked tirelessly to resolve even the smallest idiosyncrasies. While firm in his beliefs, he was always open to honest discussion. That authenticity was one of the things I admired most about him.

A man like Ken leaves a lasting imprint. He will always be cherished as a dear friend. A toast with tequila will forever bring memories of Ken. Cheers.

Wishing you peace, courage, and the gentle support of those who cared deeply about Ken.

With heartfelt condolences,
