“Buddy, Deanie, Gary and Jen, A long overdue and heartfelt condolence to you all from someone who remembers with such love the dearest family I've ever known, and that will forever remain in the most treasured of places within my heart... So many of my recent talks with God have included Dear Russell and you four I cannot express; as well as my sadness for your tragic loss. Not to mention my unforgivable absence at his burial and bedside as well... How is it this world is so full of tragedy that our own sufferings can overcome our better senses and heart's real wishes? So many Sundays I've thought of dinner and laughs with Russ and you all in that wonderful house!! The fondest of my memories still live there, and will, long after I've gone away Home, as well. I realized today just how lacking in respect and better judgement it was for me to have been so absent during Russell's worst times, and the regret I carry for seeming uncaring these past few years is a wound that aches more than most, despite my own sick days... But I suppose regret and sorrow is as much of the human condition as happiness and health, or diabetes and aids. Its also my belief that God wishes that His children carry on with dignity, respect, Love, and in the end, Forgiveness. Its the only way I can rest easy at night and face the unknown days ahead with the courage I need... And Russell had plenty of that courage within his beautiful heart, as well as grace and loving kindness that was known to the ones he held dear. And he loved his family and friends feriously... I find myself humbled just by knowing I once was among one of those lucky few that, for a season, was both friend and family to him and by you all. What a precious gift! And what greater proof exists that the Lord died for us sinners as much as His saints is there for me than that? To my adopted family I just hope you always know that these are the gifts that saw a skinny, scared kid named Tim through the darkest days and down the roughest roads that few should ever need to know. Meanwhile I won't question God's plans for me; I'll rather find some peace within the midst of it all. You are each such a blessing, and I hope to see you soon. As for Russell, he is waiting patiently for us all, whole and well, with his arms open wide... Forever and Always - Timbo
