“ It was sad news that I learned of Mrs. Walker's passing especially at a relatively young age. It is regrettable that she did not have several decades of good health.

Her professional contributions to the children of the school district was appreciated. In fact, she was sought out or lured to come to Arab High to teach social studies. We wanted her more in the beginning than she did. We offered her the option that if she did not like us, she would go back to her prior duties. We certainly liked her in both ninth grade and later senior government; and, fortunately, she did like the setting there and remained for a long time. Student gossip over many years was that she was at the top for caring about kids while demonstrating a keen academic acuity for social studies.
